

Here is the Record:

During the Confederate Reunion The Times-Dispatch made every effort to print a paper worthy of the occasion and of the City of Richmond. For this reason The Times-Dispatch gave 6,691 inches of Confederate news, exclusive of editorials, equivalent to nearly 319 columns, and printed 461 Confederate and Reunion pictures. During the same period the News-Leader gave to the Confederate Reunion 1,441 inches or nearly 69 columns, exclusive of editorials, and 7 pictures. The Journal gave 1,112 inches or 53 columns, and 4 pictures.

This is the Comparative Statement:

DR. SMITH OVERCOME AN AFFECTING SCENE

College President Breaks Down When Portrait Is Presented by Class.

"THE DISCOVERY OF LIFE"

Dr. DuBose Delivers an Interesting Address—Judge Mann Also Speaks.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] LYNCHBURG, VA., June 4.—A large crowd assembled at the Randolph-Macon Woman's College this morning to enjoy the commencement exercises of the morning, the hour being a peculiarly enjoyable one to all present. Dr. H. M. DuBose, of Nashville, was the principal speaker of the occasion, discussing for an hour the theme, "The Discovery of Life." His effort secured the closest attention possible, the address being thoroughly appreciated by the students and visitors.

Following Dr. DuBose's address Dr. Smith introduced Judge W. H. Mann, who made a short and pleasing address to the young ladies of the college.

Miss Mattie Franklin, president of the Lynchburg Alumnae Association, of the college, announces that that association had decided to make an annual dedication of books to the college for a period of five years. The donation this year, she said, included eighty-six volumes, which had been added to the College Library.

Dr. Armstrong then awarded the certificates of proficiency to the members of the class entitled to them and the degrees were conferred upon the young ladies, whose names have already been printed in these columns.

The junior class was then declared the senior class of 1908 and Dr. Smith officially declared the session of 1906-1907 at an end.

Portrait of Dr. Smith.

Dr. J. D. Paxton, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, on behalf of the graduating class, presented the college a splendid likeness of Dr. Smith, in oil, the work of W. S. Chaso. The painting was accepted on behalf of the institution by Mr. Edward P. Shaffer, the chairman of the executive committee. Dr. Smith also expressed his sincere appreciation of the motive that prompted the class in presenting his picture to the college.

Dr. Smith then began to read some verses which had been prepared by himself. Before he had proceeded very far he broke down, and there were sobs from all parts of the room, the scene being a sad and affecting one, because of the partings that are soon to take place.

The entertainment given jointly by the Jefferson and Franklin Literary Societies to-night marked the close of the commencement, and by to-morrow most of the 350 young women will have gone to their homes for the vacation.

Elon College Finals.

ELON COLLEGE, N. C., June 4.—Second day of seventeenth annual commencement of Elon College was a pronounced success, the feature being the celebration of the literary societies.

Each of three societies had two representatives and each of six speakers rendered his part perfectly. The speakers were: For the Philhellenic Society, Miss Ruth Slevick, Raleigh, N. C., and Miss Annie Spencer, Elon College, N. C.; for the Philological Society, Mr. B. M. Carter, Richmond, Ga., and Mr. R. J. Kernodle, Burlington, N. C.; and for the Clio Society, Mr. C. C. Howell, Beaufort, Fla., and Mr. S. G. Rollins, Davy, Va. Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., offered invocation.

BRILLIANT FINALS AT BUENA VISTA

Southern Seminary Commencement Marks Close of Successful Session.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] BUENA VISTA, VA., June 4.—The brilliant commencement exercises which took place at the Southern Seminary last week concluded what is generally conceded to be the most successful year of the institution's history.

The general program was published in this paper, and its execution by the young ladies gave great pleasure to the audiences and satisfaction to the teachers. It was undoubtedly the happiest commencement the old institution has ever known, one of the distinct features being the unprecedentedly large number of visitors. A very interesting incident occurred on the morning of the last day. Just before the literary department was reached in the delivery of diplomas, the president said as a preliminary he would read a telegram he received that morning. It was addressed to Miss Benita Bannister, who was about to receive her diploma in the literary department, and was dated at her home.

Grand Rapids, Mich., and signed by her father and mother, reading thus: "Proud of you? Well, I guess we are," and amid a burst of applause Miss Bannister went forward.

Special mention is due the literary societies for the most excellent work they have done this year. The annual issued under their auspices was received during commencement, and proved to be a rich and handsome publication. Among the young ladies identified with getting it out were Miss Annie Macon Potts and Miss Carrier Midyette, of Ashland.

Among the guests present were Mr. C. E. Potts, of Richmond, and his family; Captain J. C. Matheny, Monterey, Va.; Mrs. William Garth, Charlottesville; Miss Emma Anderson, Bowling Green, Va.; Miss Cora Skimore, Manquin, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Haines, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

This old institution, which has for so many years been doing the great work of female education in Virginia and has survived the evil days that followed the war and those of some years later, with their financial stress, which witnessed the closing of so many of Virginia's schools, has steadily gone forward in its career, and to-day it looks to its fortieth year with the brightest prospects and the largest and most promising plans it has ever had.

FOUR GRADUATES.

Young Ladies of Virginia Female Institute Receive Diplomas.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] STAUNTON, VA., June 4.—The final exercises of the sixty-third session of the Virginia Female Institute took place yesterday in the chapel of the school. Four graduates received their diplomas, while a large number of under-graduates were presented with awards of merit.

A brief program of musical gems preceded the awarding of honors, and constituted an admirable prelude to the exercises proper. Rev. R. C. Jett made a brief address to the graduates, and delivered diplomas, as follows: Miss Willie Mower Gibson, of Warsaw, Ky., and Miss Withelmina Watson Kasey, of Houston, Va., full graduates; Miss Martha Meriwether, of Buena Vista, Va., full graduate in instruction; Miss Anna Y. Neal, of New Brighton, Pa., graduate in art. Certificates were granted to Misses Nora Macon and Frances Myer, in bookkeeping.

The following received medals, which were awarded by Rev. W. G. Hurlburt: Miss Martha Meriwether, in instrumental music; Miss Grace L. Duncan, vocal music; Miss Mary M. Brooke, in art; Miss Nora Braxton Macon, in gymnastics; Miss Helen Derickson, in French; Miss Anna Y. Neal and Miss Virginia Holt, for scholarship.

MR. JUSTICE BREWER.

Associate Justice of Supreme Court Speaks at Trinity College To-day. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.] DURHAM, N. C., June 4.—Commencement at Trinity College to-day proved a day of many interesting occasions. There were numerous visitors in the commencement sermon was preached by Dr. Donald Sage Mackay, D. D., pastor Collegiate Church, New York City.

At the adjourned session of the board of trustees this morning J. E. Rieger, of Durham, was elected secretary to the board to succeed the deceased secretary V. Ballard. Mr. John C. Wheaton, A. B. Trinity, B. D., of the University of California, was made head of the chair of biblical literature.

The annual alumni banquet and address this afternoon was greatly enjoyed by the many alumni who were attending commencement expressly for this purpose. The address was delivered by Professor Jerome Howard of Charlotte. When the members of the A. T. O. Fraternity gathered at formal board to-night, this was the last banquet occasion of the fraternalties during commencement. Senator Lee S. Overman was elected president of the alumni for the ensuing year. To-morrow will be the big day, and Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, will deliver the commencement address.

INSTITUTE FINALS.
